Archaically called sea hedgehogs, sea urchins are tiny spiny animals that are broadly characterized as echinoderms. The animals' shells grow.

Even though sea urchins have spines, they have a lot of predators. Main enemies of sea urchins are otters, sea birds, fish, crabs, sunflower stars and humans. Mating season of sea urchins takes place in the spring. Just like many other sea creatures, sea urchins reproduce by releasing eggs and sperm cells in the water. Sea urchins are some of the world's most ubiquitous marine animals, as indeed, they can be found in nearly all corners of the planet's oceans. See photos of sea urchins (including fire urchins, pencil-spined urchins, and Venomous sea creatures on the rise thanks to climate change.
